

Scott Howard Tennis

Web Site Report

WEB SITE GOALS

Scott described his goals this way:

"I guess I would want them to think I was the best instructor around, and for the website to look professional and to find a way for it to be highly visible."

He described the desired visitor action as:

"To sprint to their phone and call me or immediately send an email. I don't have it set up like Paul does to take lesson reservation signups."

These goals are connected:

- Perceived excellence: Show why Scott is an unusually qualified coach.
- Professional presentation: Build trust through polished design, clear information, and a secure experience.
- Visibility: Help Bay Area players and parents find Scott through local search.

The intended visitor path is simple: find the site → trust Scott → contact Scott.

Text, WhatsApp, and the short inquiry form extend this direct-contact goal; they do not require a booking system.

CURRENT INFORMATION HIERARCHY

The site currently has five main pages:

- About
- Lessons Info
- Coaching Experience
- Testimonials
- Contact

The current information hierarchy is sound. It serves the goal of establishing Scott's credibility as a coach.

The main opportunity is to make important decision information easier to find. Visitors should not have to piece together who each service is for, where lessons happen, what happens next, and how to contact Scott.

SUGGESTED INFORMATION HIERARCHY

The revised structure should follow the visitor's decision path. It does not require a large site.

- Home: Positioning, proof, key services, testimonials, and direct contact.
- Why Scott: Coaching philosophy, credentials, and teaching approach.
- Coaching Programs: Adult, junior, doubles, group, league, and match coaching.
- Rates & Policies: Rates, Venmo, locations, cancellation, weather, and expectations.
- Contact: Phone, text, WhatsApp, email, response time, and an optional inquiry form.
- Shared Footer on all pages: Persistent contact links, an inquiry-form link, and links to Scott's Google and Yelp profiles.

Home

The homepage should do most of the persuasion.

Suggested page layout

AUTHORITY STRIP [USPTA] [30+ Years] [Collegiate Coach] [Ranked]
COACHING FIT [Adults] [Juniors] [Doubles & Groups] [League & Competitive]
PROOF Testimonials + dates [Teaching clip]
WHAT HAPPENS NEXT 1. Contact Scott → 2. Share goals → 3. Schedule lesson or send an inquiry

Keep this order on mobile, with each block stacked vertically. The shared footer follows the page and remains consistent across the site.

Hero

Use a specific local headline, such as:

Private tennis coaching for adults, juniors, doubles teams, and competitive players on the Peninsula and South Bay.

Place Call Scott, Text Scott, Message on WhatsApp, and Email Scott beside the headline, with Send an inquiry as a secondary link. Reuse the current jump-serve photo as the hero image; it signals expertise immediately.

Authority strip

Show concise proof, with authoritative links where available. Select the four strongest items for the strip:

- USPTA Elite Professional
- Current tennis professional at Burlingame Country Club
- 30+ years of teaching and coaching experience, including collegiate programs and ongoing competitive play
- Collegiate coaching experience
- USTA ranking and competition history

Additional context on Scott's USF and Pacific coaching history appears in this San Mateo Daily Journal profile.

Use dates for historical claims.

Question for Scott: Can you provide more recent authoritative USTA, tournament, or player-profile sources if available?

Suggested layout

Place the proof directly below the hero as four compact items:

[USPTA Elite Pro]	[30+ Years]	[Collegiate Coach]	[Nationally Ranked]
-------------------	-------------	--------------------	---------------------

Each item should use a small visual marker, a short label, one supporting line, and an unobtrusive source link where available. Use four equal-width cards on desktop and a two-by-two grid on mobile. Keep the design restrained. The strip should feel like proof, not a résumé.

Coaching fit

Use short cards for adults, juniors, doubles/groups, and league or competitive players. State the goal each service supports.

Suggested layout

[Adults]	[Juniors]
Improve strokes and match strategy.	Build skills, confidence, and a love of the game.
Learn about adult coaching →	Call Scott about junior lessons →
[Doubles & Groups]	[League & Competitive]
Play smarter together.	Prepare to compete with purpose.
Ask about group coaching →	Call Scott about match preparation →

Each card should include a short description and a simple action. Link Learn about adult coaching and Ask about group coaching to the matching sections on Coaching Programs. Make Call Scott about junior lessons and Call Scott about match preparation tap-to-call links that open the phone dialer on mobile. On desktop, keep the phone number visible and offer text, WhatsApp, email, and the inquiry form beside the call action.

Proof

Feature two or three short testimonials. Identify the player type or outcome.

Suggested layout

[Adult improvement]	[Junior development]	[Match strategy]
"Tailored the drills and lessons to me."	"The kids progressed quickly and had fun."	"Taught smart match strategies I could use."
— Mindy D.	— Jennifer C.	— Kathleen W.
<Month Year>	<Month Year>	<Month Year>

Use the actual month and year for each testimonial; use the year alone when the month is unavailable. Add a one-line description such as Adult player, Parent of junior players, or League player. Keep the full testimonials in an expandable section; retain a dedicated Testimonials page only if the archive warrants it.

Add one short "Proactive to reactive" teaching clip beneath the testimonials as visual proof of Scott's method. Link to the YouTube channel for additional clips rather than creating a media page.

What happens next

Explain the process in three steps: call, text, WhatsApp, email, or the inquiry form; share goals and availability; then schedule the right lesson.

Suggested layout

1. Contact or send an inquiry	→	2. Share goals and availability	→	3. Schedule the right lesson
Choose the easiest path		Player level, goals, location		Scott recommends the best fit

Place Call Scott, Text Scott, Message on WhatsApp, Email Scott, and Send an inquiry beneath the first step as the primary actions. On mobile, make the phone number a tap-to-call link and keep the three steps stacked vertically if the horizontal layout becomes cramped.

The three-step section should carry the main contact actions.

Why Scott

Explain how Scott teaches, not only where he has worked.

Example:

Scott combines modern technique, match strategy, and individualized feedback to help players improve with purpose.

Use the current talking-tennis photo beside this introduction.

Use a short timeline for collegiate and professional experience. Link credentials to authoritative sources where available.

Suggested layout

[Today – 2023–present]
Burlingame / private coaching
Adults, juniors, teams
Source or current profile →
[Bay Area programs – 2007–2023]
Mission, Stanford, Holy Names, Stonebrae
Program leadership and teaching experience
Outcome or source link →
[Earlier collegiate coaching]
USF, Texas–Pan American, Pacific
Collegiate coaching and team development
Verified source →

Use confirmed dates or date ranges beneath each milestone. On desktop, place the timeline on the left and a short outcome or source note on the right. On mobile, stack each milestone and its note vertically. Link the milestone label or source text to the supporting article, profile, or ranking record.

Keep the timeline selective. Mention Mission College, Stanford, Holy Names, Stonebrae, USF, Texas–Pan American, and Pacific only when they clarify Scott’s current coaching fit. Follow it with two or three outcome statements, such as building a collegiate program, coaching USTA teams, or competing at a high level.

Place the USPTA quick-tip video below the timeline as an optional example of Scott’s teaching approach.

End the page with the same five contact options: Call Scott, Text Scott, Message on WhatsApp, Email Scott, and Send an inquiry.

Coaching Programs

Organize the page by player and goal. Lead with outcomes, not a generic list of lesson types.

Example opening:

Coaching for adults, juniors, doubles teams, and competitive players—adapted to your goals, level, and schedule.

Suggested layout

Use four audience cards near the top of the page:

[Adults]	[Juniors]
Improve strokes, confidence, and match strategy.	Build skills, confidence, and a love of the game.
View adult coaching →	View junior coaching →
[Doubles & Groups]	[League & Competitive]
Play smarter together.	Prepare to compete with purpose.
View group coaching →	View competitive coaching →

Link each card to its matching section on this page. Keep these links navigational rather than contact CTAs.

Use one shared teaching-tennis photo beside the four-card group:

	[Doubles & Groups]	[League & Competitive]

Do not repeat the same photo inside every card. On mobile, place the photo above the stacked cards.

Adults

Describe the fit in plain language: private or semi-private coaching for players improving technique, consistency, confidence, or match strategy. Use an example such as: “Modernize an older stroke, build a reliable serve, or prepare for your next league match.”

Next step: Call Scott about adult coaching, Text Scott, Message on WhatsApp, Email Scott, or use the short inquiry form.

Juniors

Question for Scott: are juniors part of your intended audience? If not, drop this section.

Explain the age or experience range, the role of parents, and how progress is measured. Emphasize structured feedback, positive instruction, and age-appropriate goals. Example: “Build fundamentals and confidence while keeping lessons focused and fun.”

Next step: Call Scott about junior lessons, Text Scott, Message on WhatsApp, Email Scott, or use the short inquiry form.

Doubles and groups

Question for Scott: What guarantees can you offer here about typical group size?

State the typical group size and what players practice together. Highlight positioning, communication, patterns, and live feedback. Example: “Improve movement and decision-making as a doubles team.”

Next step: Ask about group coaching by phone, text, WhatsApp, email, or the short inquiry form.

League and competitive players

Focus on match preparation, tactical patterns, serve-and-return strategy, and purposeful practice. Connect this offer to Scott's active competition and collegiate coaching experience. Example: "Prepare for USTA or club competition with a plan you can use under pressure."

Next step: Call Scott about match preparation, Text Scott, Message on WhatsApp, Email Scott, or use the short inquiry form.

Content each program should include

Every program description should answer four questions:

- Who is it for?
- What improves?
- What format and location are available?
- What should the visitor do next?

Each section should end with its own relevant contact action, as shown above.

Rates & Policies

Keep the practical information in one place:

- Private and semi-private rates
- Group pricing logic
- Venmo payment instructions, after the handle is confirmed
- Cancellation and weather policies
- Lesson locations and court-access boundaries
- What to bring

Suggested layout

[Rates & Policies]
Clear pricing. Simple expectations.
[Rates]	[Payment]
Private: $___/hour	Venmo: @_____
Semi-private: $___/hour	When payment is due
Groups: ask for quote	Other accepted methods, if any
[Locations]	[Policies]
Peninsula / South Bay	Cancellation window
Available courts	Weather and rain policy
Map / directions →	Rescheduling and lateness
[What to bring]
Racquet • water • shoes • goals for the lesson
Questions? Call, text, WhatsApp, email, or send an inquiry →

Use the same section order on desktop and mobile. Keep rates and the Venmo handle current. Make the final contact line a persistent path to the Contact page or the relevant direct-contact method.

Possible additions to payment methods are cash, check, Zelle, PayPal, or card payment; publish them only after Scott confirms that he accepts them.

Question for Scott: which payment methods do you accept?

List the actual lesson areas and recurring courts when confirmed. Link each location to a map or directions page for that public court or club.

Do not send visitors to a separate blog to find current prices. Keep the page current.

Contact

Lead with direct contact rather than a booking calendar.

Suggested layout

[Contact Scott]
Call Scott	Text Scott	WhatsApp	Email Scott	Send inquiry
Typical response time: within one business day

Short inquiry form		Serve-forward
Name		photo
Player age and level
Goals, location, availability
[Send inquiry]

Use a two-column layout on desktop and stack the form above the photo on mobile. Keep all five contact options visible before or within the form area. The form is a backup for visitors who prefer to explain their needs in one message.

Use the current serve-forward photo as a supporting visual. Keep the contact details and form more prominent than the image.

- Make the phone number a tap-to-call link.
- Add a Text Scott link. Use the dedicated eSIM/business number and include a prefilled message asking for player level, goals, location, and availability.
- Add a Message on WhatsApp link alongside the other contact options, using a prefilled inquiry message.
- Make the email address a tap-to-email link.
- Add a short optional form for visitors who prefer to send their details in one message. Suggested form fields: name, player age/level, lesson type, goals, preferred location, and availability.
- State the preferred contact method and expected response time.

The cleanest setup is one dedicated carrier mobile number on an eSIM for phone calls, SMS, and WhatsApp. It keeps Scott's personal number private while giving visitors one consistent number. The line must remain active for WhatsApp verification and ongoing account access.

Use an embedded Tally form as the default. Tally provides a standard website embed and free self-email notifications, so the form can appear inside the WordPress page or a future static site without building a server-side form. Tally embed guidance · Tally pricing

Tally Free and Google Forms are the lowest-cost options. Tally is the better fit if the form should feel integrated with the site. If a developer rebuilds the site as custom HTML, Formspree is another good fit: it accepts a normal HTML form and handles submissions without PHP or a server. Its free plan allows 50 submissions per month; paid plans start at $10/month. Formspree HTML forms · Formspree pricing

Google Forms is free and embeddable, but it is less visually integrated with the site. Tally's paid branding removal currently costs more than Formspree's first paid plan, so use Tally Free unless custom branding becomes important. Google Forms embed guidance

Shared Footer

Use one compact footer across every page:

[Scott Howard Tennis]
Phone	Text	WhatsApp	Email	Inquiry form
See Scott on Google →		See Scott on Yelp →

Make the phone, text, WhatsApp, email, and inquiry-form links persistent but visually secondary to the page content. After the Google Business Profile is verified, link See Scott on Google to the profile's share link. After the Yelp page is claimed, link See Scott on Yelp to the Yelp page. Set both profiles' website links to the new Home page.

VISIBILITY AND REPUTATION

Create and verify one Google Business Profile. Use accurate service areas, phone, website, photos, services, and hours or availability guidance. If clients do not visit Scott's own address, use a service-area setup rather than implying a public storefront. Google provides Business Profiles for eligible in-person service businesses at no charge. Google Business Profile guidance

The profile is an external discovery and reputation channel, not a page in the site hierarchy. Keep the site's primary actions direct: call, text, WhatsApp, email, or inquiry form.

Claim a free Yelp page as a secondary listing. Keep the name, phone, website, and service area consistent. Do not buy Yelp advertising until the free listing produces measurable inquiries.

Ask satisfied clients for honest reviews. Do not offer incentives. Monitor new reviews and reply professionally as a recurring activity.

PLATFORM AND COST OPTIONS

Because this is a small brochure site, it may not need WordPress hosting.

- Carrd Pro Standard: $19/year. Easiest low-cost option for a compact site with forms, analytics, custom domains, and meta tags. Carrd
- Cloudflare Pages: Free static hosting. Best when a technical person will maintain the site. Cloudflare Pages
- GitHub Pages: Free hosting with custom-domain support. Best when a technical person will maintain the site. GitHub Pages

Compare total annual cost, including domain, email, forms, maintenance, and future edits.

QUESTIONS FOR SCOTT

- Junior coaching: Are juniors part of your intended audience?
- Doubles and group coaching: What guarantees can you offer about typical group size?
- Rates and policies: Which payment methods do you accept?
- Authority and proof: Can you provide more recent authoritative USTA, tournament, or player-profile sources if available?

RECOMMENDED SEQUENCE

- Answer the Questions for Scott and resolve the related content decisions.
- Confirm Scott's current credentials, locations, rates, policies, and Venmo handle.

- Rebuild the Home page around authority, local relevance, and clear contact actions.
- Consolidate information across Coaching Programs, Rates & Policies, and Contact.
- Create Google and Yelp listings.
- Add a simple review-request process.
- Compare the cost of secure WordPress with a static rebuild.

The strongest opportunity is not more technology. It is a clearer, more professional presentation of Scott's expertise that makes contacting him effortless.
